Week 2: Communication Styles

I tested into the Analytical communication style, which aligns closely with how I've always described myself. This style is characterized by a logical, process-driven approach and a strong focus on accuracy...traits I definitely identify with. I would say I'm highly task-oriented and strive to get things right, and I typically rely on structure, organization, and to-do lists to stay on track. I work best in environments with clear expectations and defined goals. While I enjoy collaborating with others, I'm equally effective when working independently.

If I had to guess, Natalia, one of my coworkers at Vervece, likely has an Amiable communication style. She's incredibly kind, warm, and soft-spoken—one of the first people to welcome me when I joined the team. We built a connection quickly, and I've noticed she consistently puts in effort and always meets her responsibilities. Amiable communicators are known for being relationship-driven, consistent, and loyal while avoiding conflict—all of which seem to reflect Natalia's personality.
